

437 West 35th Street,
New York, Nov. 23, 1914.

Mr. Cary B. Lewis,
3000 State Street,
Chicago, Ill.

My dear Friend:

I have just returned home a day or two ago, too late to prepare anything for you by November 15th on the subject desired. If you have a copy of Alice Dunbar's book on "Masterpieces of Negro Eloquence" and will turn to my production there you will find what I think to be the best solution to the race problem in the United States. I hope things went to suit you in the recent election. I am loading my gun now to pitch into President Wilson. I think all Negro writers should fire into him for his unjust and un-American attitude toward his black fellow citizens.

With best regards to your family, I am,
as always,

Very truly yours,

ROR/EBH

